Investment Commentary

The turmoil in global financial markets continues with global equity markets declining sharply throughout September and October.

The credit crisis, which is the root cause of the market collapse, began one year ago with the collapse of the subprime loan industry in the United States. Today that initial collapse has evolved into a global crisis of financial confidence. Governments have begun to implement coordinated intervention programs to address the crisis. It is too early to fully assess the impact of these initiatives.

As disturbing as the recent months have been, long term investors must continue to look forward. In these difficult circumstances, that means being prudent and diligent, not fearful.

It also means identifying and thoroughly analyzing potential opportunities that will arise when markets begin to stabilize and once again trade on fundamentals.
